

Call for Papers, Projects, and Provocations
Practice & Research in Architectural Design, Production, and Theory

Dream – Play – Challenge: The Future of Residential Living

25th – 26th June, 2020, at the Felleshus, Nordische Botschaften / Nordic Embassy, Berlin.
A symposium as part of the festival Women in Architecture, Berlin 2020.

What does it mean today to reside, to be a (non-)resident, to be in residence or to build a residence? The traditional concept of the “residential” has been thrown into question by the challenges of the 21st century. Residing – an act so fundamental to humanity – is contested by socio-economical and cultural uncertainties, be it by precarious ecological conditions, forced uprootedness, re-defined concepts of gender and family, or by culturally diverse models of domesticity. At the same time, the concept of the “residential” continues to lure us with its echoes of stability and permanence, as a term which conjures the desire for a home within societies that often find it more and more difficult to provide one.

Are traditional notions of the “residential” still tenable and generative? In what form can ways of residing that challenge traditions and respond to current pressures be built or imagined today? In the past, architects have contributed innovative though often prescriptive proposals to such questions. We are specifically interested in contributions that use contested situations as a starting point to Dream - Play - Challenge the production of residential space.

Projects and research may work through (but are not restricted to) the following approaches:

- the playfulness of dwelling
- cooperative, collaborative, and performative residential practice
- the language of residential place-making
- fictional residential space, dreams of residing
- antagonism, provocation or persistence in the residence

This call is addressed to architects and researchers including PhD fellows, graduates in architecture, planning and related fields, as well as to actors and initiatives exploring new strategies of residential living. We welcome a range of presentation formats including research papers, project presentations both built and unbuilt, drawings and film. Selected contributors will be invited to submit a paper to be included in the planned publication, Dream – Play – Challenge: The Future of Residential Living.

Symposium organisers: Sarah Rivière and Wiltrud Simbuerger on behalf of n-ails, the Berlin Network for Women Architects, Interior Designers, Engineers, Landscape Architects and Urban Planners.

Submission guidelines: Please email your abstract of 400–600 words addressing the objectives, content, methodology, and results of the work to: FutureOfResidentialLiving@gmail.com. Please include the title of the project, 1–3 images, and a short CV including affiliation and contact details.

Deadline for abstracts: 17th February, 2020

Results of the selection process issued: mid-March 2020

Deadline for revised abstracts for the symposium booklet: 18th May, 2020

For further information please contact:

Sarah Rivière, info@sarahrivierearchitect.com, tel: +49 (0)176 303 466 15

Wiltrud Simbuerger, wiltrud.simbuerger@gmx.de, tel: +49 (0)176 84 81 89 67